

hm26 Fred

Fred Scott (1942-2001) was one of Britain's most renowned furniture designers of his period. As a tribute to Scott, and expanding on the success of his hm25 seating, Hitch Mylius has developed hm26, a family of generously proportioned sofas providing a more relaxed and informal version of Scott's classic.

The hm26 Fred collection can be used with the tables and benches from the hm25 Scott collection, and has its own specifically dimensioned table.

Multi-tone upholstery is available - cushions and body can be upholstered in different fabrics and leathers. Special sizes are also available.

Born in 1942 the son of an artisan furniture maker, Scott served his apprenticeship as a cabinet-maker in High Wycombe before gaining a scholarship to London's Royal College of Art in 1963. Widely regarded as the most talented British furniture designer of his generation, his reputation was firmly established with the launch of his classic Supporto series for Hille in 1979.

Later in his career he worked closely with Hitch Mylius to develop hm25 and other upholstery designs. Fred Scott's working life was dogged by recurring illness and he died in 2001. After his death, and in collaboration with Scott's daughter Georgia, Hitch Mylius expanded the range with the addition of hm26 in 2002.
